

FINAL REPORT
GENDER, MIGRATION AND DIVERSITY / IMMIGRANT WOMEN DOMAIN
ATLANTIC METROPOLIS CENTRE
MAY 2013

Evangelia Tastsoglou and Alexandra Dobrowolsky
Saint Mary's University

The May 15, 2013 closure of the Atlantic Metropolis Centre (AMC) prompted us, the co-leaders of the Gender, Migration and Diversity/Immigrant Women Domain (or Gender Domain), to take stock of the multi-faceted work completed under the Gender Domain's auspices. The following Final Report strives to be comprehensive, but given the extent and range of work undertaken, produced and in progress, along with the challenges posed in tracking such diverse activities (that include research / publishing / training / mentoring / knowledge dissemination /community and policy-maker exchanging, sharing and collaborating in the creation of new knowledge), it inevitably appears as somewhat selective, and condensed. Nonetheless, the 63 pages of this document provide a testament to the efforts expended by Domain leaders, members and the many individuals and groups who benefited from its existence over the last ten years (December 2003 to May 2013).

A number of disclaimers are also required here. First of all, although many of the entries in this document can also be found in the AMC's Annual Domain Reports, this Final Gender Domain Report includes activities that took place before the inception of the AMC, and with efforts expended around the need for the AMC and the Gender Domain. This Final Report also lists ongoing activities that will continue long after the AMC's closure. Second, many of the activities documented in this Final Report can also be claimed by other domains, as it is indeed the case that over the years a great deal of collaboration ensued not only between the domains, but also between the participating Universities, other Universities in Atlantic Canada, and, finally, between provinces. Such inter-domain, inter-disciplinary, inter-University, inter-linguistic community, and inter-sectoral collaboration is ultimately the great, innovative and enduring legacy of the AMC. Third, it should also be acknowledged that many of these activities, publishing, training and collaborating would have taken place anyway, without the existence of the AMC. And yet, the AMC's existence ensured increased structural support, in turn, producing a multiplier effect, which, above all, fostered a climate that cultivated cross-pollination among disciplines, Universities and sectors, which could be challenging, but proved to be, ultimately, invaluable.

It is with sincere thanks and profound appreciation to the multitude of individuals and organizations with whom we worked, locally, regionally, nationally and transnationally, over the last ten years, that we have produced this document in the hope that this Final Report will prove to be useful as a quick reference tool and lasting resource.
