

ECONOMIC AND LABOUR MARKET INTEGRATION DOMAIN OF ATLANTIC METROPOLIS CENTRE and the ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT OF THE SOBEY SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Pier 21

FRIDAY

22 MARCH 2013

8:00 am -11:00 am

Leading in new technologies is key to continued economic prosperity. But highly-skilled STEM (scientific, technical, engineering and mathematics) workers have become increasingly mobile. As a result, public policy must change to attract and retain STEM workers.

PROUDLY PRESENT:

STEM Immigrants: The New Mobile Labour

A talk by internationally renowned expert

BARRY CHISWICK

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Q & A Session will follow the talk.

Barry R. Chiswick is Professor and Chair of the Department of Economics at the Columbian College of Arts and Sciences (CCAS), George Washington University. Among his many career awards and recognitions, Dr. Chiswick is co-recipient of the 2011 IZA Prize in Labor Economics. He is recognized as having done the seminal research on the Economics of Immigration, and continues to be the leader in the field, publishing books, articles and critical analyses in many journals and papers.
